Jayden's Impossible Garden

by Méline Mangal, illustrated by Ken Daley

Amidst all the buildings, people, and traffic in his neighborhood, Jayden sees nature everywhere: the squirrels scrounging, the cardinals calling, and the dandelions growing. But Mama doesn't believe there's nature in the city. So Jayden sets out to help Mama see what he sees. With the help of his friend Mr. Curtis, Jayden plants the seeds of a community garden and brings together his neighbors—and Mama—to show them the magic of nature in the middle of the city.

Dragons on the Inside (And Other Big Feelings)

by Valerie Coulman, illustrated by Alexandra Colombo

Feelings on the inside aren't always visible on the outside. This book validates young children's emotions and helps them recognize, describe, and cope when they are anxious or overwhelmed on the inside. Throughout the book, multiple stressful situations are explored, and in each scenario, readers see the main character's initial inner reaction to the stress and how it is diffused or diminished through a small act of connection from someone "on the outside."

Jamie's Class Has Something to Say

A Book About Sharing with Grown-Ups

Jamie is excited for Family Day and all the visitors that will be coming to the classroom. As the class prepares, they share how they feel when adults don't listen closely enough to what the kids want, need, like, and don't like or when adults place unfair, often gendered expectations on them. Together, they decide to use their Family Day celebration to help the adults in their lives understand them better.

Jamie was listening to the others and thinking about how Jamie's mommy listened to what Jamie had to say, even when she didn't agree.

At circle time, Ms. Jones told the class about Jamie's idea. As a special surprise, they were going to make "This Is Me" posters to share with their visitors that afternoon.

Then Jamie had an idea. "Why don't we tell them more about ourselves at Family Day?" asked Jamie and went to find Ms. Jones.

Our Emotions and Behavior Series

by Sue Graves, illustrated by Desideria Guicciardini and Emanuela Carletti

Small children have big feelings. This series uses inviting, vividly illustrated stories to help kids understand how their emotions and actions are related—and how they can get better at managing both. At the end of each book, a two-page series of pictures invites children to tell a story in their own words. A special section for adults suggests discussion questions and ideas for guiding children to talk about their feelings.

Each book: 28 pp., full-color, HC, 7¾" x 9½". Ages 4-8.

My Body Belongs to Me

A book about body safety

by Jill Starishevsky, illustrated by Angela Padrón

Without being taught about body boundaries, it is hard to understand when abuse is happening—or that it's wrong. This book offers a tool parents, teachers, and counselors can use to sensitively share and discuss the topic of sexual abuse. Its simple language helps children understand their private parts belong to them alone. This book empowers children to speak up to feel, be, and stay safe.

Tips and tools for protecting your body, brain, psyche, and thumbs from the digital dark side

by Alex J. Packer, Ph.D., illustrated by Jon Davis

Without avoiding the dark side of technology, this book gives teens what they need to stay safe and take charge online. Pulling back the curtain on the hidden aspects of the digital world, award-winning author Alex J. Packer, Ph.D., guides readers through the process of evaluating their relationships with their screens, social media, and tech in general.

The book invites teens to join the resistance and learn how to thwart the manipulative forces trying to control and profit off their users. But it doesn't demand that readers ditch smartphones or deactivate social media. Instead, it suggests strategies for playing favorite games and posting on favorite apps while also doing good in the world and bringing joy and encouragement to others.

Create an Emotion-Rich Classroom

Helping Young Children Build Their Social Emotional Skills

by Lindsay N. Giroux, M.Ed., with foreword by Mary Louise Hemmeter, Ph.D.

An emotion-rich classroom intentionally surrounds children with social emotional learning experiences and supportive interactions. It's about teaching emotional literacy and vocabulary with explicit lessons, but it's also about responding when a child is upset, modeling how to cope with frustration, discussing emotions in storybooks, and asking children to share examples of emotions from their own lives. This book provides frameworks for planning and implementing strategies to support emotional development in children.

Empowering Underrepresented Gifted Students

Perspectives from the Field

edited by Joy Lawson Davis, Ed.D., and Deb Douglas, M.S.

In gifted education, an important and contentious issue that has yet to be sufficiently addressed is the systemic underrepresentation of gifted students who have been discriminated against in school-based gifted and advanced learner programs because of their race, ethnicity, gender identity, sexual orientation, socioeconomic status, or other realities. This book gives a voice to those students and brings their stories into focus.

Nearly 30 contributors in the field of gifted education share their knowledge to help educators move closer to ensuring equity, access, and excellence in gifted education. By arming historically marginalized gifted students with self-advocacy strategies, these remarkable students will be better enabled to fulfill their dreams.

When Gifted Kids Don't Have All the Answers

How to Meet Their Social and Emotional Needs (Revised & Updated Edition)

by Judy Galbraith, M.A., and Jim Delisle, Ph.D.

Gifted kids are so much more than test scores, grades, and "learning potential." And it's sometimes difficult to see past the potential to the child who may be anxious, lonely, confused, or unsure of what the future will bring. This one-of-a-kind guide offers practical suggestions for addressing the social and emotional needs of gifted students.

The expert authors present ways to:

- provide all gifted kids with a safe, supportive learning environment
- help gifted underachievers, perfectionists, and twice-exceptional students
- advocate for gifted education

Complete with engaging stories, strategies, Q&As, essays, activities, and resources, this book is for anyone committed to helping gifted students thrive.

Learning Supports

Teaching Twice-Exceptional Learners in Today's Classroom

by Emily Kircher-Morris, M.A., M.Ed., LPC

Twice-exceptional (2e) learners have often been misunderstood, disciplined, unchallenged, and left behind. They're called lazy and unmotivated. But they're not: a diagnosis, such as ADHD, autism spectrum disorder, or anxiety, masks their giftedness. Or their giftedness blocks educators from seeing their struggles. Often, educators don't have the tools to meet their needs.

This book bridges that gap to help teachers recognize, support, and meet the academic, social, and emotional needs of 2e students.

Meet the Needs of Today's Youth

Teaching Kids to Pause, Cope, and Connect

Lessons for Social Emotional Learning and Mindfulness

by Mark Purcell, Psy.D., and Kellen Glinder, M.D.

Children today face many challenges that did not exist a generation or two ago, and rates of emotional disorders (including anxiety and depression) have increased steadily over the years. Helping children understand their emotions and behavior when they're young will set them on a path to being successful students and empathetic people throughout their lives. This book helps educators do that. With easy-to-implement lessons and activities, this book provides classroom-tested techniques to help students:

- manage and reduce their anxiety
- separate emotions from actions
- stop impulsive reactions and respond mindfully to difficult situations
- improve social skills, social awareness, and academic performance
- develop empathy
